Cybersecurity Primer Updated: ETFs to Capitalize on Growth in this Sector and Strategies to Protect Your Business.

Goal 1: Gain Exposure to Growth in the Cybersecurity Sector.

- Strategy One: The Established ETFs. HACK: ETFMG Prime Cyber Security ETF and the CIBR: First Trust NASDAQ Cybersecurity ETF. Both funds offer relatively low-cost, diversified, and liquid ways to own multiple companies within the cybersecurity realm. These remain two of the largest funds by asset size as both have more than $2 billion AUM.

- Strategy Two: The New ETF. BUG: Global X Cybersecurity ETF. An ETF based on a smart-beta index, BUG has gained nearly 75% versus about 57% in CIBR over the last eighteen months.

- Strategy Three: The Tangential Approach. SKYY: First Trust Cloud Computing ETF. This cloud-focused ETF includes exposure to traditional heavyweights such as Amazon, Microsoft, and Google in addition to smaller holdings in cybersecurity-related names such as Splunk, CrowdStrike, and Zscaler.

Goal 2: Implement Strategies to Protect Your Business from Cyber Attacks.

- Cyber Liability Insurance
- Authenticating Financial Requests
- Securing Work from Home
- Responding to a Cyber Attack (What To Do and What Not To Do)

Cybersecurity & Ransomware

A little over two years ago we highlighted an emerging technology-related investment trend in cybersecurity stocks.

At that time, we were seeing a wave of demand for hardening the security of both in-house and cloud-based IT platforms. The genesis of which were numerous large-scale company data breaches of personal information from both employees and customers.

These attacks create public relations and legal nightmares for those on the wrong end of a security breach. They also foster bolder and more sophisticated methods of attack by thieves trying to access sensitive data. The latest and perhaps more worrisome variation of these assaults is known as ransomware.

In May, Colonial Pipeline was attacked by a devastating ransomware security breach that led to the complete shutdown of their operational systems. Hackers essentially placed a piece of malware on their network that locked-up data and demanded a fee or "ransom" to unlock the files. The company was forced to pay millions, assumably in a non-traceable digital token such as Bitcoin, to receive the key to restore their data.

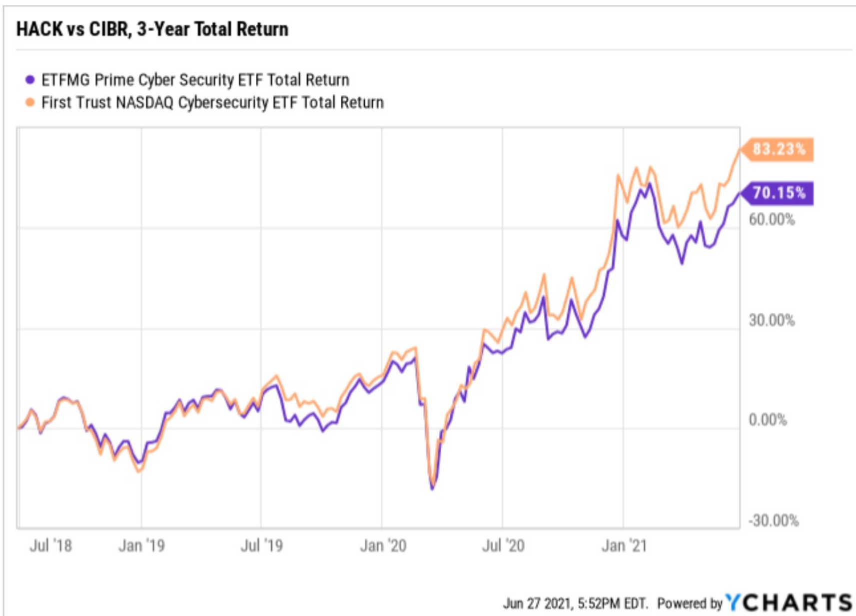
For some industries, this may seem like the cost of doing business in today's digital age. However, with an old-school energy company such as Colonial Pipeline that serves 45% of the East Coast's fuel needs, the effects can be devastating.

It took the company several days after unlocking their data to bring their operations safely back online. Global commodity prices were impacted, gas shortages were reported, the FBI was called in, and the bad guys ultimately were rewarded for their efforts.

This wasn't an isolated incident, either. The following statistics show just how quickly these attacks are growing in size and scope:

- The number of organizations impacted by ransomware globally has more than doubled in the first half of 2021 compared with 2020.
- The healthcare and utilities sectors are the most targeted since the beginning of April 2021.
- It is estimated that ransomware costs businesses worldwide around $20 billion – a figure that is nearly 75% higher than in 2019.
- This year the average recovery cost is $1.85 million, and the average ransom paid was $170,404. (source)

The bottom line is that these trends are going to accelerate for the foreseeable future and Fortune 500 businesses are going to have to address their security vulnerabilities through top-notch cyber-threat specialists. Our expectation is that this will lead to even greater expansion in revenue and earnings for the leading companies in this security field. That demand creates an opportunistic investment dynamic that you can capitalize on for your client portfolios.



Furthermore, as an advisor, we want to arm you with resources to protect your own business from these pernicious threats. Even simple procedural changes can make a world of difference in protecting your network and avoiding a catastrophic failure.

The Investment Landscape

Our previous report on cybersecurity keyed in on two big players in the exchange-traded fund (ETF) marketplace. Those being the ETFMG Prime Cyber Security ETF (HACK) and the First Trust NASDAQ Cybersecurity ETF (CIBR). Both funds offer relatively low-cost, diversified, and liquid ways to own multiple companies within the cybersecurity realm. These remain two of the largest funds by asset size with $2.5 billion and $3.9 billion, respectively, in pooled investment capital.

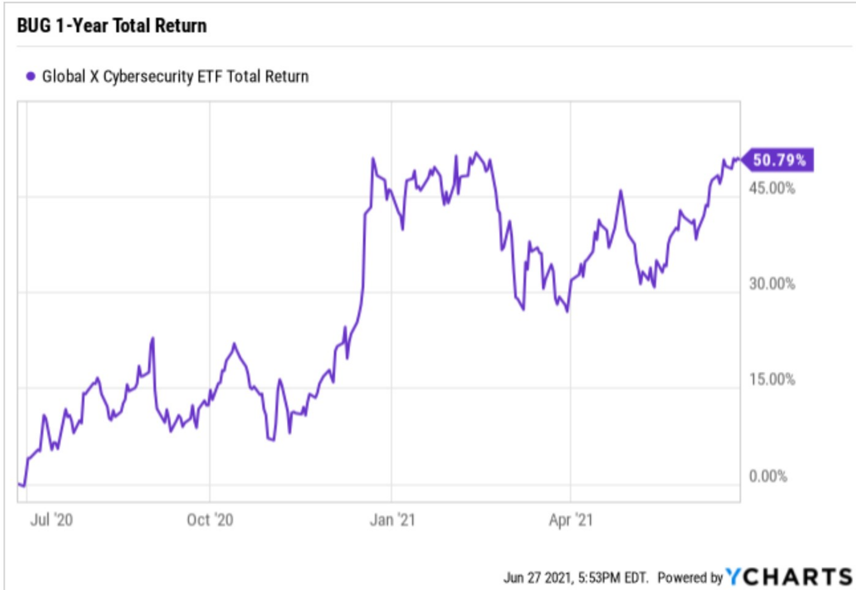
To refresh your memory, HACK was one of the first entrants in the diversified cybersecurity industry and blazed a trail for others to follow. Their strategy centers around an index that selects approximately 60 stocks across both U.S. and foreign-domiciled companies. Because of its broader portfolio approach, the largest holding, CISCO Systems, makes up less than 4% of the total portfolio allocation. This is truly a shotgun-style diversification method that many portfolios seek out to spread their capital over numerous stocks.

CIBR takes a more concentrated approach by selecting just 40 holdings from the cybersecurity industry. These companies are screened for minimum market capitalization, trading volume, and other essential factors. Because of its more focused index methodology, CIBR allows for its top 10 largest holdings to have a much larger impact on the overall performance of the fund.

Over the last three years, that strategy has worked to produce stronger relative returns versus the industry trailblazer HACK. Much of that performance gap has been achieved over just the last half-year as the technology sector momentum has favored the top CIBR portfolio holdings.

The reality is that both CIBR and HACK share many of the same underlying positions with modest variations in how they distribute capital over the basket. Over long periods, they are likely to track each other closely and achieve similar results.

Either can be utilized as a capable ETF to weigh the portfolio towards the cybersecurity investment idea. They would play well alongside other thematic tech ETFs such as the ARK Innovation ETF (ARKK) or SPDR FactSet Innovative Technology ETF (XITK) when constructing a fresh approach to modern technology growth trends.



It's also worth noting that traditional market-cap weighted technology funds such as the Technology SPRD Fund (XLK) and Vanguard Information Technology Fund (VGT) have very little cybersecurity exposure because many of these stocks fall in the small- or mid-cap range. That leaves the door open to augment existing core holdings in these popular tech funds with a meaningful tactical position at the industry level.

Every time we revisit an investment theme, we simultaneously re-evaluate the available investment options to see if there are any new standout offerings. Cybersecurity just so happens to be one of those industries with various methods of detecting and preventing the same overarching threat. That creates the opportunity for fresh indexes and asset managers to exploit strategic companies or methods.

Global X Cyber Security ETF(BUG)
Inception Date:	10/25/2019
Assets:	$529.9M
Avg Daily Volume:	356K
Expense Ratio:	0.50%
of Holdings:	36
YTD Return:	3.36%
3-Yr Return:	N/A
Mstar Rating:	N/A

The Global X Cybersecurity ETF (BUG) does just that by taking a novel approach to its stock selection criteria. The underlying smart-beta index identifies companies with high growth potential in this field that transcends legacy sector, industry, or geographic classifications. It contains 36 total holdings with an emphasis on pure play stocks such as CrowdStrike, Zscaler, Palo Alto Networks, FireEye, and CyberArk Software.

Most of the BUG portfolio (53%) is geared towards packaged software companies like those noted above. These are typically the first line of defense in preventing, detecting, and isolating malware on a company's network. They are also the most easily adopted across a wide range of devices, operating systems, and IT server environments.

This novel ETF also has some modest foreign exposure with 25% of its portfolio dedicated to stocks outside of the United States. That includes technology-advanced countries such as Israel, the United Kingdom, Japan, and South Korea.

The unique mix of securities has translated into stronger performance than the industry benchmarks over its year-and-a-half lifespan. BUG has gained nearly 75% versus about 57% in CIBR over the last eighteen months.

The chart here shows a pullback in the first half of the year, but since then it has surged to test its previous all-time price highs. A breakout above that level would signify that cybersecurity stocks are ready to reclaim their fast-paced uptrend.

BUG has managed to rapidly accumulate over $500 million in assets and its underlying holdings are heavily traded daily. That means it is going to be a liquid and easily utilized fund for advisors that require a steady volume.

Those that don't yet have an allocation to the cybersecurity industry should closely compare this fund against both HACK and CIBR to see if it suits their style or preferred holding profile. Despite being less than two years old, it's already earning a reputation as an attractive growth alternative to the industry benchmarks. Another appealing feature is the 0.50% expense ratio, which is 10 basis points cheaper than its peers.

Lastly, there is another interesting ETF alternative that may satiate the needs of investors who are seeking a dual-pronged technology approach. The First Trust Cloud Computing ETF (SKYY) is one of the industry leaders in all things cloud-network related. That includes exposure to traditional heavyweights such as Amazon, Microsoft, and Google in addition to smaller holdings in cybersecurity-related names such as Splunk, CrowdStrike, and Zscaler.

First Trust Cloud Computing ETF (SKYY)
Inception Date:	7/6/2011
Assets:	$6.3B
Avg Daily Volume:	219.5K
Expense Ratio:	0.60%
of Holdings:	66
YTD Return:	11.74%
3-Yr Return:	102.2%
Mstar Rating:	3 Star

The First Trust smart-beta ETFs have always proven to be built upon sound portfolio screening factors, and SKYY is further testament to that. Its components are chosen and weighted according to a "cloud score" determined by its operating category of software, platform, or infrastructure-as-a-service.

That currently equates to 66 stocks with a maximum limit of 80 securities at any given time. Individual securities also are capped at a maximum allocation of 4.50%, which provides a much greater distribution of capital over the entire portfolio basket.

Like BUG, this cloud-focused fund is coming off a sharp correction in the first half of the year that tested its long-term moving average. The ensuing rebound in growth stocks has begun to show signs of building momentum with an attractive price pattern for technical specialists.

SKYY has $6.3 billion in assets and charges an expense ratio of 0.60% annually. This ETF is a perfect middle ground for those portfolios that want more exposure to cybersecurity stocks, but without the pure-play channel that would potentially expose them to greater performance variances than the major technology benchmarks.

With SKYY investors are going to experience a combination of technology, consumer discretionary, communications, and even healthcare platforms in one wrapper. It's a likeable vehicle for many reasons and would integrate well as a thematic fund to take advantage of the fast-paced trend of cloud computing migration.

Protecting Your Business from Cyber Threats

Protecting your own business from the threat of cyber-attacks should be an increasingly important objective for all advisors. Not only do you have to worry about a breach of sensitive client and employee information, but you also must be careful about hackers taking the route of a ransomware demand that could cripple you financially. There are several ways to mitigate this risk if you take it seriously and consider the ramifications of not having these simple safeguards in place.

Cyber Liability Insurance. This insurance coverage should be at the top of your list from day one and is easy to add as a catch all to any data breaches or financial loss that ensues from a targeted systems breach. Cyber coverage can reimburse you for the cost of notifying customers of a data breach, replenishing extortion demands, fighting lawsuits, and even fraud monitoring expenses. Many policies also will cover you for the risk of credit card processing done online as well.

I'm sure you currently have some form of general liability, workers compensation, errors and omissions, and other industry-standard coverage in place. Cyber liability should join those lines of coverage in your arsenal and is typically inexpensive to secure for those that have never had a serious IT problem in the past. You can seek it out by either contacting your existing insurance broker to inquire about coverage options or simply Google your way through various reputable insurance carriers to get independent quotes.

This may be the last line of defense in your cyber protection game plan, but it should be the first place you turn to protecting the viability of your professional services practice. It's a safety net that will help you sleep better at night knowing you are protected from a threat you can't readily predict or quantify.

Authenticating Financial Requests. A friend of mine told me about a real-world situation where an HR administrator received an email request from the CEO to change his direct deposit information. The HR administrator didn't even think twice about questioning the directive from a superior, and sure enough sent a paycheck to an online bank account that they were unable to recover. Unfortunately, there was no recourse through law enforcement or other agencies to remedy the situation. It was a mistake that could have been easily prevented with strict authentication protocols in place.

This type of social engineering scheme (often referred to as phishing) is becoming increasingly more common throughout small- and medium-sized businesses. It's easy to smirk at that scenario and say it would never happen to you. However, can you vouch for the actions of every employee at your firm and how they would handle an email or text message that looks like it's coming from you or a client? How common would it be to receive an email from a client telling you to wire $10,000 to their bank account for home repairs, only to find out it wasn't your actual client requesting that action?

The advice of many experts in this realm is to follow every request that has financial ramifications with an authentication protocol. For some advisors that means setting up security questions with clients that only they know the answers to. Those can be stored in your CRM and only accessed by users that are authorized to handle those client requests. Upon receipt of an email request, you can then call the client to verify that it's truly them. Other more advanced firms may have a secure email system that would force clients to login with a username and password to authenticate their request.

It may seem overly burdensome to some who don't want to jump through these extra hoops, but the peril of making a mistake with so much communication being digital today is almost unfathomable. It's worth going the extra mile to ensure that no errors are made and that your protocols are strictly followed by all.

Work From Home. Everyone last year was thrown into the world of working from home with very little notice of best practices for remote IT systems. You may simply have grabbed your laptop and cobbled together a patchwork of websites and platforms that you access from your home network. While many are now coming back to the office, it's likely that we see some form of hybrid work schedules persist for the foreseeable future.

The reality is that your home network (or those of your employees) may not be as secure as the heavily monitored IT environment at the office. Below is a checklist of items that you should be evaluating to ensure that your processes are best-in-class to preventing a cyber breach outside your controlled environment.

- Employees are only using company-approved devices for data storage and communication.
- Passwords are complex and rotated on a regular schedule to ensure a secure platform. Multifactor authentication should be used at every gateway that allows for it.
- All operating systems are up-to-date and are running some form of anti-virus or anti-malware programs.
- Users are employing a secure VPN to access company files that may include client- or employee-sensitive data. This encrypts data between the remote terminal and the server.
- Data is stored in a secure manner and backed up regularly with layers of archives in multiple locations.
- Employees are trained to be on the lookout for suspicious emails or files sent to them and are provided with a plan of how to respond when in doubt.

This list isn't the type of thing you want to score 3 out of 6 on. It's truly a critical multi-layered security plan that you should be able to confidently check all the boxes on. Any holes should be immediately remedied to ensure you are properly protected from cyber threats and are acting as a responsible guardian of your client data.

Another great thing to do is document these protocols for your own regulatory compliance and even consider sharing them with your clients. It will help strengthen your value proposition that you take these matters seriously and are elevating their security as one of your core business practices.

Responding To A Ransomware Attack. The correct technical response to a ransomware attack should be handled by an IT professional with knowledge of your network architecture. There are even specialists that handle this specific threat and can help you navigate the decisions necessary to restore your data.

There are numerous tasks they can take to isolate the affected machines and wall off areas that may not have been touched by the malware. However, there are some immediate steps you can take as part of your front-line response to assist in their success.

What to do...

- Immediately remove any infected systems from the broader network and take a picture of the message screen with the ransom demand.
- Secure all backups and ensure that off-site archives are available for restoring data.
- Investigate where the malware was originally introduced (i.e. patient zero).
- Contact your cyber insurance provider and inform them about the situation.

What not to do...

- Do not restart an infected device. This can often further corrupt the system or foster penalties by the hackers.
- Do not connect any additional external devices such as USB drives or other accessories.
- Do not communicate on the infected network. It's likely that hackers have access to more of your information than you think, and they may be able to intercept your channels.
- Do not immediately pay the ransom. It is best to get feedback from your IT specialist, the cyber insurance company, and other important principals before deciding to pay for the decryption key. It may be better to wipe and restore the affected components with a solid backup rather than risk paying the ransom.

These tasks should be a starting point for formulating a comprehensive cybersecurity policy at your firm.

If you aren't familiar with all the necessary terminology and systems yourself, it may be time to hire an outside firm to proactively secure your network. They can provide you with the tools and resources to bolster your defenses so that you hopefully never have to encounter this type of situation.

Conclusion

The cybersecurity narrative is unique because it has so many wide-ranging applications for both investment purposes and real-world applications. It's never been more important to prioritize this defense platform given the fact that so much of our workflow is conducted on computers and mobile devices.

However, that built-in demand also is what makes for an attractive growth/investment opportunity well into the future.

Best,

Tom

Morgan EM Local Currency Bond ETF) PDBC (Invesco Optimum Yield Diversified Commodity Strategy No K-1 ETF)	If there's going to be a global reflation, then it will likely come with a weaker U.S. Dollar. From early 2017 through early 2018 the dollar declined from over 100 to below 90 (so more than 10%) and that had a significant impact on stocks: The 2017 decline in the dollar resulted in a 31% gain for the S&P 500 from December 2016 through January 2018. But, the dollar decline also created opportunities for specific sectors and assets classes to handily outperform the S&P 500, and we want to identify those opportunities in three strategies: • Targeted sector exposure via a focus on U.S. Exporters • International ETF Exposure • Commodities Allocations.	11/5/19	Various ETFs Listed in the Issue

Opportunities in Small Caps IJR: iShares Core S&P Small-Cap ETF VBK: Vanguard Small-Cap Growth ETF XSLV: Invesco S&P SmallCap Low Volatility ETF	The stock market has become extremely "top-heavy" with a few mega-cap tech stocks like AAPL, AMZN, MSFT, GOOGL largely driving market performance and being the difference maker in annual performance. While that's been a good thing for the last several years for many investors, the reality is that now they are also not as diversified as they should be on a market-cap basis. Proper diversification across multiple criteria (including market cap) is essential to long term outperformance and portfolio optimization, so it's always something we need to be focused on. For today's issue, we selected three sectors: Tech, Financials and Energy, and we provided three ETF options in each sector depending on whether you are looking for broad-based exposure (and diversification) or want a more targeted strategy (higher risk/higher return).	3/24/2020	Multiple ETFs selected for each sector depending on risk tolerance.
Longer Term Industry Opportunities from the Coronavirus Health & Wellness (Three ETFs) Mobility As A Service (IBUY: Amplify Online Retail ETF) Cord Cutting (JHCS: John Hancock Multifactor Media and Communications ETF). Stay At Home (XITK: SPDR FactSet Innovative Technology ETF)	In this issue, we build on the theme of a return to optimism by identifying specific stocks, ETFs, and industries likely to experience long-term tailwinds from this historic coronavirus pandemic black swan. This trend will shift the spending and habits of millions of Americans over the course of the next decade.	4/7/2020	PTH: 101.80% IBUY: 201.10% JHCS: 71.44% XITK: 132.90%	SPY: 60.93%
Three Industries That Will Benefit from Changes in Corporate Behavior Cloud Computing (SKYY: First Trust Cloud Computing ETF) E-Commerce (SHOP: Shopify & GDDY (GoDaddy) Online Payment Processing (IPAY: ETFMG Prime Mobile Payments ETF)	Each part of our "What To Buy" series have become more granular, and that trend is continuing today with the final installment of the series. Part One focused on broad sectors. Part Two identified larger industries that should benefit over the longer term from changes in consumer behavior from the coronavirus experience. Now, Part Three will go even deeper and rely on our own anecdotal experiences to identify sub-indices that should benefit over the longer term from changes in business behavior in a post-coronavirus world.	4/21/2020	SKYY: 82.23% SHOP: 154.40% GDDY: 35.41% IPAY: 82.76%	SPY: 56.08%

Three Strategies for a "U" Shaped Recovery Preferreds: PGF (Invesco Financial Preferred ETF) Dollar Stores/Fast Food: DG: (Dollar General), DLTR: (Dollar Tree), MCD: McDonalds Consumer Staples: RHS (Invesco S&P 500 Equal Weight Consumer Staples ETF).	Markets are pricing in a pretty high chance of a "V-shaped" economic recovery, but we think it's prudent to have a playbook for a less optimistic, "U-shaped" economic recovery that has the U.S. economy mired in slow growth for some time. So, in this issue, we wanted to identify proven sectors and stocks that are likely to thrive if the economic recovery is more restrained, i.e. U-shaped. The following research achieves that goal by identifying areas that have proven resilient under previous recessions and periods of slow growth, and are likely to continue to thrive in that environment.	5/5/2020	PGF: 6.93% DG: 23.03% DLTR: 29.84% MCD: 28.67% RHS: 22.32%	SPY: 49.10%
Finding the Sweet Spot of Yield, Duration and Quality in Today's Bond Market JPST (J.P. Morgan Ultra-Short Income ETF) FTSD (Franklin Liberty Short Duration U.S. Government ETF) IGSB (iShares Short-Term Corporate Bond ETF)	Global bond yields have collapsed since the coronavirus crisis began in earnest in mid-February, and that leaves advisors with a difficult situation of where to find adequate yield without taking on too much duration risk. Case in point, the 10-year yield is yielding about 0.70%. A .70% annual coupon for locking up money for 10 years! Absolute yield levels are obviously historically low, but we've still got to do the best we can in this environment, and that means finding the best yield possible while limiting duration risk and credit quality risk.	5/19/2020	JPST: 0.61% FTSD: -0.56% IGSB: 1.61%	SHY: -0.60%
Finding Sustainable Dividends In An Uncertain Environment NOBL (ProShares S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats ETF), DGRO (iShares Core Dividend Growth ETF). TDIV (First Trust NASDAQ Technology Dividend ETF).	This issue is all about finding sustainable dividends that income investors can count on in all market conditions, because the simple reality is that most bond yields just aren't high enough to generate the required income for clients. That means identifying companies that have sound balance sheets, track records of methodical dividend growth, and business models that are likely to survive even the worst pandemic scenarios.	6/2/2020	NOBL: 33.27% DGRO: 31.70% TDIV: 39.78%	SPY: 38.49%

Three Strategies to Gain Exposure to 5G Strategy 1: The Chipmakers. QCOM (Qualcomm), MRVL (Marvel Technologies). Strategy 2: Radio Frequency Providers. QRVO (Qorvo). Strategy 3: The 5G ETF. FIVG (Defiance Next Gen Connectivity ETF).	The focus of today's issue came from a subscriber request: 5G. 5G is one of the biggest secular growth trends in the market, and by that, I mean trends that will continue in a positive direction regardless of what happens in the economy in the near term. Additionally, 5G is one of the most popular investing topics among regular investors, so we thought now would be a good time to do a "deep dive" in 5G and detail:	6/30/2020	QCOM: 55.86% MRVL: 66.65% QRVO: 69.90% FIVG: 40.18%	SPY: 40.20%
Finding Value in European Equities VGK (Vanguard Europe ETF). FEZ (SPDR Euro STOXX 50 ETF)	Coronavirus has finally caused the Europeans to aggressively stimulate the economies, and as long as that continues, that should provide a needed spark to help European equities outperform. Because of that positive change, we think European ETFs offer more attractive risk/reward than U.S. sectors that are considered "values," specifically financials, energy, and industrials. That's especially true given U.S. value styles have underperformed growth by as much as 66% over the past five years! We think a better choice is to look to Europe to fulfill the value component of a portfolio.	7/14/2020	VGK: 33.31% FEZ: 30.60%	VTV: 37.78%
Actionable Strategies to Own COVID 19 Vaccine Producers PPH: The VanEck Pharmaceutical ETF. GERM: The ETFMG Treatments Testing and Advancements ETF.	In today's Alpha issue, we are going to go in-depth on actionable investment strategies to gain exposure to the companies that are leading the COVID-19 vaccine race. Specifically, in today's issue we take the broad research we covered in Thursday's webinar, enhance it, and get much more tactical (looking at investment strategies to get exposure to vaccine players). Specifically, we cover two actionable strategies that we think are appropriate for advisors and their clients: Strategy 1: Owning the Pharma Companies Leading the Vaccine Race. Strategy 2: Diversified Exposure via ETFs.	7/28/2020	PPH: 17.21% GERM: 22.89%	SPY: 34.67%

What Outperforms in a Declining Dollar Environment Falling Dollar Strategy 1: International Stocks. XSOE (WisdomTree Emerging Markets ex-State-Owned Enterprises Fund). Falling Dollar Strategy 2: Currencies. FXE. (CurrencyShares Euro Trust). Falling Dollar Strategy 3: Gold Miners. GDX (VanEck Vectors Gold Miners ETF).	A sustained period of dollar weakness doesn't come along often (it last occurred in 2017) but when it does, it can create substantial outperformance in certain sectors and indices. We want to make sure you have a comprehensive "falling dollar" playbook for both general and tactical asset allocations, because the fundamentals for a sustained period of dollar weakness are as strong as they've been in years (surging U.S. debt/deficits and rebounding growth overseas).	8/11/2020	XSOE: 29.29% FXE: 0.73% GDX: -13.02%	SPY: 30.12%
Ideas for When There's a COVID Vaccine Annoucement JETS (U.S. Global JETS ETF) PEJ (Invesco Dynamic Leisure and Entertainment ETF) KBE (SPDR S&P Bank ETF) REZ (iShares Residential REITS ETF)	I believe today's issue demonstrates why Alpha is the perfect complement to the daily Sevens Report, because early last week in the regular Sevens Report, we discussed broad sectors that would benefit and outperform if there is a positive announcement on a COVID-19 vaccine. But, in today's Alpha issue, we follow up on that research and go much more in-depth to identify specific ETFs and stocks that: • Are outsized beneficiaries of a "return to normal" that likely will follow a successful vaccine • That are trading at historic discounts due to COVID 19 fallout and • Were good businesses before COVID 19, and likely will	8/25/2020	JETS: 38.77% PEJ: 59.99% KBE: 63.66% REZ: 38.50%	SPY: 25.86%
Opportunities in the Electric Vehicle Battery Industry ALB (Albemarle) SQM (Sociedad Quimica y Minera De Chile S.A. ADR) LIT (Global X Lithium & Battery Tech ETF)	So, given this event, the anticipated media coverage of it, and the recent focus on TSLA, Nikola (the EV truck company), and other EV companies, we wanted to revisit the EV space and specifically the battery market, because it is undeniable the growth potential here is still very, very substantial. We explored the EV market three years ago when we first launched Alpha but much has changed in the industry since then, and with Battery Day looming, we wanted to revisit the industry, again with a specific focus on battery technology and the companies and ETFs associated with battery advancement – because battery capacity remains the key to the growth of the	9/9/2020	ALB: 1.82% SQM: 7.91% LIT: 10.21%	SPY: 0.43%

Election Preview Trump Wins Biden Wins No Clear Winner (Multiple ETFs Listed)	We had long planned to release our Alpha Election Preview issue this week, as we knew that with the first debate a week away, investors focus would turn towards politics and we wanted to ensure you had a post-election roadmap, along with specific ETF ideas, for any election-related discussions with clients. But, that interest in the election will now be turbocharged with the surprise passing of Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsberg. So, with six weeks to go until the election, we wanted to explore the three possible scenarios (Trump wins/ Biden wins/No one wins right away) and provide a tactical roadmap and identify ETFs that should outperform in each scenario.	9/22/2020	N/A	N/A
Finding Sustainable Growth in the Wellness Sector PTON (Peloton) LULU (Lululemon) BRBR (BellRing Brands) BFIT (Global X Health & Wellness Thematic ETF) MILN (Global X Millenials Thematic ETF)	Today's issue explores one of the sectors that we think will benefit from long-term changes in behavior from the pandemic: The wellness sector. Hopefully (and the data and history back this up) we are now closer to the end of the COVID-19 pandemic than we are the beginning, and once the pandemic ends, we believe life will return mostly to a pre-coronavirus normal. And we think that return to normal will disappoint very optimistic projections on some of the sectors that have outperformed due to COVID, like telemedicine, videoconferencing, widespread delivery, etc. But one sector we think can continue to see growth long after the world return to normal is the wellness sector, because this sector was experiencing substantial growth before the pandemic hit. And, the pandemic has just turbocharged that growth.	10/6/2020	PTON: 12.77% LULU: 10.60% BRBR: 50.17% BFIT: 35.19% MILN: 36.92%	SPY: 28.80%

Cyclical Rotation to Value RSP (Invesco S&P 500 Equal Weight ETF) VTV (Vanguard Value ETF) RPV (Invesco S&P 500 Pure Value ETF)	We scoured the universe of value ETFs and mutual funds to identify those that we think are "best of breed" and represent a cost-effective, alpha generating solution for any advisors who wants to rotate to value after the election. And, we were surprised by our findings – namely that higher fee, actively managed ETFs and mutual funds lagged the more traditional, passive value ETFs – and that keeping it simple in the value space yielded the best returns over the past several years.	11/3/2020	RSP: 33.96% VTV: 29.01% RPV: 46.91%	SPY: 26.91%
Four Post Election Tactical Strategies Idea #1: Electric Vehicles & Clean Energy (LIT/ICLN/ESGV) Idea #2: Industrials & Infrastructure Spending (VIS/PAVE) Idea #3: Healthcare & Marijuana (VHT/MJ) Idea #4: Emerging Markets & China (XSOE)	What Specific Sectors and ETFs Can Outperform in a Biden Presidency/Divided U.S. Government? That question was the inspiration for today's Alpha issue, because while election results have not been certified yet (that will start to happen in states later this week) the likelihood is that we will have a Biden Presidency and divided government in 2021 (with Republicans holding a small majority in the Senate). Reflecting that fact, I've been asked multiple times over the past week what would outperform in this political environment, so I imagine this topic has been coming up in client conversations – and I want to make sure that you have the strategies and talking points you need to turn those conversations into opportunities to strengthen relationships.	11/17/2020	Eight Different ETFs Listed.
Bitcoin GBTC (Greyscale Bitcoin Trust) BLOK (Amplify Transformational Data Sharing ETF) ARKW (ARK Next Generation ETF)	This Alpha issue is focused on a suddenly popular topic: Bitcoin. Our goal with this issue isn't to sway you one way or the other to invest in Bitcoin. Instead, we want to help you guide responsible conversations about: 1. What it is and 2. Who it's for, and 3. How you can potentially own it within a conventional portfolio. Put more frankly, many of us "know" about bitcoin – but are we prepared to really discuss the inner workings of the cryptocurrency and thoroughly list and explain the responsible ways clients can gain exposure to it? The point of this Alpha issue is to make sure we are all ready to do just that, so you can turn any bitcoin conversation into an opportunity to strengthen client relationships and grow your business.	12/1/2020	GBTC: 24.43% BLOK: 53.14% ARKW: 14.47%	SPY: 16.42%

Four Strategies That Outperformed in 2020 and Can Do It Again in 2021 Long Term Pandemic Tech Opportunities (IBUY/XITK) New Wave of Online Payments/E-Commerce (IPAY) 5G Revolution (FIVG) EV Batteries (LIT)	2020 has created fantastic growth in certain sectors and industries, and stocks and ETFs linked to them have produced huge YTD returns. But, while looking back on what worked is helpful, especially at year-end, we wanted to identify those sectors that not only have outperformed, but that can continue to outperform in 2021. So, in this Alpha issue, we highlight four Alpha strategies that have massively outperformed, but that we believe have long-term staying power and can continue to outperform in 2021 and beyond.	12/15/2020	IBUY: 15.71% XITK: 10.59% IPAY: 10.24% FIVG: 14.01% LIT: 27.77%	SPY: 15.45%
Two Playbooks for 2021	As our focus now turns from 2020 and towards 2021, I believe we always must be prepared for two outcomes – the expected, and the unexpected. So, in this Alpha issue, we wanted to provide two ETF playbooks: The expected "Return to Normal" trade, and the Contrarian Scenario. Playbook 1. What's Expected: The "Return To Normal" Trade. The perfect storm being high economic confidence, vaccines rolling out to vulnerable groups, low-interest rates, and further government stimulus in the first quarter. That paints the perfect picture for capitalizing on beaten-down areas of the economy that are ripe for further expansion. Playbook 2: The Unexpected: A Contrarian Scenario. A scenario where things just don't work as planned. Perhaps inflation exceeds all norms, Treasury yields shoot up unexpectedly, geopolitical disruption intercedes, or the economic recovery just simply falls short of expectations.	12/29/2020	Multiple ETFs across both strategies
Energy Transmission (The Picks and Shovels of the EV Gold Rush) First Trust NASDAQ Clean Edge Smart Grind Infrastructure Index Fund (GRID) NextEra Energy (NEE) EV Charging Basket: Tesla (TSLA), ABB Ltd (ABB), Eaton Corp (ETN), Blink Charging (BLNK)	Energy (and the transmission of energy) are the proverbial "picks and shovels" of this modern-day EV gold rush. Electricity demand is likely going to skyrocket for households that will be transitioning to electric and hybrid vehicles in the next decade. More advanced battery systems constantly needing to be plugged in and recharged are going to tax the current electric utility network capacity while growth in EV sales will also propel a nationwide surge in charging stations, similar to the rollout of gas stations in the early 20th century.	1/12/2021	GRID: 6.45% NEE: -6.41%	SPY: 13.37%

However, now the focus is turning to less growth-friendly policies, including potentially higher taxes and increased regulation. While these policies will impact the markets broadly, they'll also impact specific sectors even more than the broad markets. But they are now saddled with massive debts and ballooning capital structures that could be headwinds on investor returns going forward. Many smaller stocks, however, were able to utilize government programs (PPP and others) to recapitalize healthily over the past year and those that have survived to this point are now in an extremely favorable position to capture future opportunities as the economy reopens. So, we want to make sure you know which ETFs can give you exposure to quality small-cap companies that are 1) Financially sound, 2) Exited the pandemic with their business intact, 3) Stand to benefit from an acceleration in the economy, and 4) Could see earnings surge as the economic reopening continues.	4/20/2021	PSCD: 6.43% FXG: -0.23% RWJ: 6.18% ISCV: 5.29%	IWM: 3.44%
